THE CITY HALL As the City Hall building approaches completion, public interest in its existence and welfare begins to revive. There appear, however, to be some misanprehensions afloat as to its status, which may be well to remove. An impression seems to prevail that it is at the present moment a "public" institution and that it is" the people's" property. This idea, doubtless based upon the fact that it is built on a public site and that a Government grant has been promised in sid, is quite erroneous. It is, at the present moment, as much a private building as any other edifice put up by Messrs A., B. or C. It is the property of certain share holders, represented by a Committee, who. until the building be opened have its entire ownership and control. completed, however, the owners, in purmance of an agreement entered into and in consideration of the site being given and a grant in aid promised by the Government, will throw open to the general public, irrespective of nationality or residence, that portion of the building devoted to the Library and Museum Arrangements for the use of the remain har the Theatre. Meeting rooms, Ball coms, etc., will be readily, entered into. but the "ownership" of the shareholders

The most indifferent to literature can hardly regard a well-appointed public library without some feeling of pride in its general racter, and Hongkong will, we are sure be no excention to the rule. Similarly the Museum, if heartily supported by gilts or loans, cannot fail to become a popular and interesting institution. | We are scarcely afraid that a lack of material will be the chief drawback. MacDonnell's famous reference to Strasbourg Geese at the opening of the Hongkong Hotel will we fancy hardly apply to the publicspirited colonists who have supplied the want so long felt of a "City Hall." But a short period is necessary for its completion, when we may hope to see their efforts rewarded by a prompt recognition of its usefulness.

Who did it, and what extent of culpability is attachable to them? It was clear that a large party, numbering from 30 to 50, were carrving arms in the neighbourhood of Sowkewan on that occasion. Where they came from it is not so easy to say ; they were not near the village proper; and the only evidence on that point seems to be that the man in Hospital who gave his evidence very intelligently, and said that they came from the Hill side. This constable seemed to think that the intention of the thieves was to. attack the house of Sam Lee. It was sufficient for them, to know that they, were there for an unlawful purpose; and it was clear enough that they were, one and all, responsible for what took place at that time, and for the death of the poor sergeant. Any one foun to have been amongst them, would be guilty of the murder of the poor sergeaut. The only direct evidence is that given by the constable Feroze Khan against the horse-coolis. That evidence the Jury ough not to reject merely because it was the evidence of only one; the question was, did the Jury place any credit upon the statement, and if they did then it was sufficient if they did not believe it then they could have nothing to say as against the horse coolie. For himself, he was compelled to admit that the statement given by Feroze Khan was suspicious—only there were two sides from which it might be looked at. The constable may have been afraid of making such a charge incautiously until he had satisfied him elf as to the absence of the horse-coolie from the Station. THE CAPTURE OF NINGPO Time passes rapidly in China, and events really of yesterday, are relegated with strange rapidity to the region of history. The Taeping rebellion is one of these. Barely seven years have passed since the rebels held Ningpo and were posted in cordon round Shanghai. Yet these events have completely sunk into the past, and a large proportion of those who were familiar with them, have g ne from amongst us. To a majority, probably, of Shanghai residents, the incidents described by Mr. Lord, in his recent lecture on the rebel occupation of Ningpo, are quite strange; but even those who remember the occurrence, will read with interest his graphic description of events to which he was an eye-witness. The press of North China was in its infancy in those days, and brief summaries of their more prominent movements, were the only records given of the Taipings and their doings. In publishing, therefore, Mr. Lord lecture in its entirety, we believe we give much that is new even those who were here during the stirring times he writes of. The document is a long one, and will extend over several numbers of this paper; we have no fear. however, but that the interest will be fully sustained throughout. It will be remembered that, at the end of 1861, the rebels had overrun nearly the whole of this and the adjacent provinces, and advanced towards the coast, to the two ports of Shanghai and Ningpo. The former was defended against them by foreigners; the latter was left to the guardianship of the native soldiers, whose cowardice was the more astounding by contrast with the pluck of their countrymen in the Taeping ranks. After having captured successfully the various cities in their line of march, the rebels appeared before Ningpo on the 7th Dec.: and without cannon, with hardly a decent musket, carried it by a comp de main on the 10th, almost without firing a shot. The Imperialists madescarcely a show of defence waited not to oppose the assault, but flung away their arms and bolted, directly their opponents reached the foot of the walls. The incidents connected with the attack ; the preparations made to resist it : the taxes levied for the fortifications raised, the soldiers (?) recruited; the approach and the appearance of the rebel troops; and their rapid and easy victory—all are described by Mr Lord with spirit, and with an accuracy and fullness of detail that only an eyer witness can command. The rebels are acquitted of much actual destruction of life or property, during their occupation of the city, but a vast amount of death and misery is indirectly attributable to them. A majority of the inhabitants fled, the city was nearly deserted; food was looted from far and near, the coolies and boatmen were impressed for its conveyance, business was stopped by the general feeling of insecurity; and the result of this social disruption was, of course, the occurof ineffable misery and wantheightened by the severity of a winter to which no foreign resident, here, can remember a parallel. For three days, Ningpo was given up to pillage; but after that, tolerable order was restored, and some few inhabitants returned. The large mahowever, declined the invitation. They preferred the shelter of the foreign quarter, the safer refuge at Shanghai, or even out of the way nooks in the hills, to the questionable society of men who were rtainly ordered to purchase what they needed, but concluded that they had a perfeet right to purchase at their own price. which was not always remunerative to the vendor. The relations of the new power with foreigners were tolerably friendly. though the strict isolation of the foreign quarter, the protection offered in it to wealthy natives whom the robels were only too auxious to squeeze, and the defiance offered to their Customs rules, occasioned some dissatisfaction. So matters went on till the apring May 1862, when the rebels lost the city as quickly as they had won it. before soldiers as far superior to them as they had been to the Imperialists. The English assault may or may not have been remeditated; there can be little doubt that it was so. The position in which our vessels anchored was such as to incur the risk of being struck by a shot fired at any attacking force; and when, on the morning of the 10th May, the Imperialists were encouraged to engage the rebel battery off the East gate, this danger was realised. The Kestrel was first struck or endangered, and the other gun-boats at once replied. A few hours bombardment followed; after which a landing party from the Encounter scaled the walls near the Salt gate, and the Rebel garrison fled. Hundreds were trodden to death, and the road was lined with flags and spears, thrown away in their haste to escape. Un the morning of the lith. the officials were able to extol to Peking heir own transcendent; toil and bravery and the success which had crowned their efforts. Ningpo was once more under a settled Government: and the inhabitants dared to return-to be squeezed, certainly, but not robbed. -N. C. D. News.

Some relies of Mary Queen of Scots, bequeathed to her Majesty by the late Lord Belhaven, have just been forwarded to her from France; a purse, the work of unleavened bread in a near box, to which

EXTRACTS FROM REVIEWS. members of the Board shall decide the (From the "Straits Times," July 27, 1868. Some thue ago we had occasion to remark upon the progress that Literature as represented by the Press had made and was making in the East, and our attention has again been called to the subject by the receipt of a Hongkong publication which deserves some notice and which we have much pleasure in introducing to the knowledge of our readers. We allude to Notes and Queries on thing and Japan, published Fort Zelandia, Ningpo, Yang-tze-kiang, mouthly by Mr Saint, the proprietor of the Shanghai (general map), British settlement China Mail newspaper. This publication Shanghai, Kinking, Tientsin to Tung is well printed on good paper, and in size Chow, Tung Chow to Peking; Peking, and shape is very like its well-known name. Takoo forts (Chinese,) Japanese Islands, sake or prototype at home, and is equally a Nagasaki; Nagasaki, (harbour and neighmine containing very curious and useful bourhood,) Yokohama, Yokohama and information regarding the language, litera- Kanagawa, Yedo bay, Hakodadi, an engrature, history, manners and customs of the ving of the Coins of Japan, and a chart Chinese and in a less degree of the Japanese. It says a good deal for the extent and stability of the footing of Europeans in China, that such a publication as this should be established and conducted with apparently successful vigour. The publication is altogether a very interesting one, and wishing it every success, we commend it to the attention and support of our readers.

(From the "Friend of India," June 4, 1868. We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of the numbers for the current year of "Notes and Queries," a most deserving Anglo-Chinese monthly, edited by Mr N B. Dennys, whose "Treaty Ports of China and Japan" are so well known. From the names attached to the " Notes" we can see that the contributors include some of the best Chinese scholars in the East. Its interest is not confined to China, and it will be of valuable assistance to all scholars, who have directed their attention towards the subject of Buddhism and its literature, and generally to all who are interested in oriental antiquities. It deserves to be better

(From the "London Examiner," May This really useful volume ["Treaty Ports China and Japan"] is intended as a guide for travellers and residents in China mercantile men generally. It contains au account, historical and political, of all the open ports of these countries, together with own authorities, who will deal with the has been carefully compiled and edited by | U offender in accordance with the Laws of his | Mr N.
